Communicate with your legislature and let them know what issues are important to you and how their decisions will impact your life.

Here are some tips for effectively communicating with your legislature:

- Write or give your name and address.
- Write or call about one bill or subject at a time.
- Have the name and/or number of legislation you are interested in.
- Be concise and to the point when calling or writing.
- Be courteous when calling or writing. Commend the legislator when possible.
- First, ask the legislator to support or oppose the legislation or subject you are calling or writing about.
- Give your own opinion in your own words. Stay away from form letters and postcards.
- Give reasons for your opinions and share opinions of organizations you may belong to.
- Request that the legislator let you know their opinion on the issue.
- If you receive a generic, non-committal letter, respond to your legislator and ask again for their position.
